Note from Our President

Greetings,

I would personally like to thank all members and guests that attended the October 25th Remembering Elliot tribute and program by Essdras Suarez! It was a truly touching tribute to a quiet, witty, hardworking, dedicated club member, friend, and president.

A special thank you goes out to Pam Meoli who spearheaded the tribute, to Linda Shelales who organized the snacks and beverages, to John "Spike" Gill for putting the slide presentation together, opening up, and setting the room up, and to the members that brought goodies and drinks to the in-person meeting.

A reminder to members: when choosing an image for competition please check that it is one you have not submitted previously and which placed 1st, 2nd, or 3rd in an AVCC competition. Review the Rules page under the Competition tab on the AVCC Visual Pursuits web page for details.

I am very proud of all of you amazing members of our little club! To quote Henry Ford: "Coming together is a beginning. Keeping together is progress. Working together is success."

Have a great week and see you Wednesday (I'll be on Zoom).

Note from the Editors

It is October 29th. In the last 3 weeks we have seen terrible violence unleashed anew, both in the Middle East and in Lewiston, ME - virtually our own back yard. Has the emotional overlay of these dark events had any effect on your photography? In this month's interview with John Mauro he shares that photography helps him get away from life's stresses. This is probably true for all of us. But can photography also be a medium we can use to express what we perhaps cannot put into words? In those moments, is our photography then not an escape but rather a leaning into, a digging deeper, an exploration of deep feelings and thoughts that defy language? A means of not only self-expression but also self-revelation? Do we find ourselves attracted to different things in different moods? Feel free to send us your reflections on this.

November's competition category is Architectural Details and you will find plenty of information in the Tips section on shooting these details. The Editors have been having a lot of discussion amongst ourselves while sending images back and forth to each other – kind of like study-buddies. Hopefully other members have “study buddies” too. So helpful!

We want to say a formal “Thank You” to the Mednick family for their contribution that allowed us to have Essdras Suarez give a presentation on Street Photography for Elliot's memorial evening on October 25th. Remember, you can find the recording of it on the AVCC website. It will be up there until Nov 25th.

As a reminder, the category for January is “In the Woods” and now might be a great time to get out and get some remaining leaves on the paths, or floating in the brooks, or dangling from a branch. Or try your hand at “In Camera Motion” after Silvana Della Camera's presentation on Nov. 1st. Consider grabbing a club member and exploring together.

See you at the meeting!

November Program

AVCC is pleased to present “ICM - More than just Pretty” presented by Silvana Della Camera on Wednesday, November 1, 2023 at 7:30 PM. The meeting is a hybrid format; in person at the the Hudson Senior Center, 29 Church St., Hudson (please arrive no later than 7:15), or remote on Zoom. The presentation will be on Zoom and broadcast on a large screen at the Senior Center. The Zoom meeting room opens at 7:00 with a 15 minute social time followed by AVCC business at 7:15. Nonmembers interested in attending as guests should email avcc.digital@hotmail.com .

Silvana Della Camera

Past President of the Stony Brook Camera Club, Silvana Della Camera is the recipient of many photography awards and her images have appeared in Yankee Magazine, the Boston Globe, Lighthouse Digest, and were featured in Nikon’s 100th birthday celebration.

Silvana has presented and judged at camera club councils, camera clubs, and art associations throughout the US. She helps others expand their own photographic vision through her photography workshops, photo walks, photo tours, private instruction, and club presentations on various photography topics including infrared, Milky Way, black and white, nightscapes, deep space photography, and time-lapse.

She challenges photographers to consider that there is much more in a scene than what is visible to the human eye and to tap into the power of their cameras to discover it.

"ICM – More than just Pretty"

Photographs created with intentional camera movements (ICM) convey mystery to the viewer. It lets them use their imagination to fill in the blanks & inspire a lingering gaze. When we think of this style of photography, the art of painting comes to mind. Using ICM takes the mundane out of a scene. In this presentation, you will learn techniques for the transmogrification of a scene and the impact ICM has on you, the photographer. Learn how breaking the rules can make you a more imaginative photographer.

John “Pudge” Mauro

John was born into a Southborough family that has been deeply embedded in the community for generations. His father’s family came to Southborough in the 1800s. His grandfather owned a 15-acre farm near Southborough Center, and his two great-aunts ran a farm and Mauro’s Roadside Farmstand on Route 9 for generations. John’s Uncle Cal was the highway department foreman and a call firefighter, while his Uncle Willie owned Mauro’s Market. His father was the Head of Grounds at St. Mark’s School, and a call firefighter. His mom was the DPW secretary. His cousin Steven currently owns Mauro’s Café on Main St. Counting John and his brother Joe, there were 7 family members in the fire department.

John started as a call firefighter at age 15, and later became the first in his family to become a full-time firefighter in Southboro. His younger brother also worked as a full-time firefighter. John worked his way up through the ranks and became Chief, as did his brother after him.

The skills and knowledge of firefighting are a passion for John. He says his career provided a challenge for him, and an opportunity to use his natural mechanical aptitude and his drive to understand how things work. Along the way he bolstered his aptitudes and skills with formal education in electronics and fire science. He liked the challenge of having to know building construction, the application of building codes, and the fabrication, repair, and re-building of tools and equipment. Over the course of his career, he contributed to building the former fire station and to re-building two fire trucks. John taught Fire Prevention programs at the Fire Academy for six years.

Member Snapshot - John Mauro - continued from page 9

John has a number of interests outside firefighting and the photography we know him for (more on that later). One is the “mud run” with a group called Rugged Maniac. A mud run is “an annual obstacle course race, which is hosted in multiple cities across the United States and Canada.” (Wikipedia https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Rugged\_Maniac), the latest of which was in VA in October. John prepares for this 5K, 25-station up-and-over obstacle course in the mud by working out in the pre-dawn hours 6 days a week. He has done 14 mud runs in 8 years.

Image Courtesy of John Mauro

Another interest is weather, particularly severe weather. He would someday like to chase storms in the southern plains even though, he complains, there are way too many people chasing storms since the popular reality TV show, “Storm Chasers.”

Having grown up right near the tracks in Southboro, John developed a lifelong interest in trains. Though many people find that trains seem to have a sense of romance and adventure, John wanted to know how they work and spent many hours researching and studying them. He even worked for CSX as a conductor for a while.

John currently works part time as an Estimator for the Sunshine Sign Company in Grafton. As he says this, he starts to explain gold-leaf lettering in signage, how the trade used to be more artistic, and details about this. It becomes clear that whatever John gets into, he dives deeply into it.

John's creative and artistic side can be seen in his photography. John started out with a Pentax K1000 camera in his 20s. He upgraded within the Pentax line over the years, recently purchasing a Pentax K-1 Mark II. People kept telling him about the camera club, and he finally came to the club in 2019 through Pam Meoli, who he knows from Northboro. He never took formal courses in photography, but did go on a Boston Seaport tour with Hunt's last year and says he learns a lot from the presentations and critiques at competition. He would love to go on a group trip for photography like the ones fellow camera club member Sue Abrahamsen goes on.

Some of the things that attract John to photography are getting out into nature and the way it can take your mind off life's stressors. In particular, John shares how it really helped him when he was going through the ups and downs of his son's struggles with Substance Use Disorder. By having to explore the environment, try new things for competitions, carefully search for and observe interesting subjects, compose the shot and do it technically well, one's heart and mind are invited into a different space. In that way, photography can be life-giving. John gives a shout-out to his wife, Ellen and their two children, Victoria and Mark, for their support and encouragement of him in his photography journey.

And with all that said, there might be one burning question left: "where does the nickname 'Pudge' come from?" According to John, "I have had it since I was about 3 days old. It has to do with my nose. Both sides of my family are Italian. Before I was born one of my dad's uncles said that I would have the biggest Italian nose imaginable, but I was born with a pudgy nose instead. My dad nick-named me Pudge, and it has stuck all these years."

On the Wall at Cafe 641 - Pam Meoli

There are many options these days for what we can do with our images, not just keep them in our cameras or laptops. Come visit "Exploring Surfaces" and see for yourself. I have examples of acrylic, metal, canvas (framed and unframed) and wood - and although I don't have an example I recently was contacted by a friend to get permission to use an image for a tattoo (a feather)!

Each surface offers a different effect - for instance, I love printing on canvas - that is the most cost effective and allows me to change my artwork with the seasons. Some clients like the contemporary look of unframed but I prefer to frame mine - to me it turns them into almost a painting.

Acrylic makes colors pop.

Glass has its own sheen.

Metal is lightweight and easy to ship and provides a crisp, clear image.

Wood is a more muted, subtle look. Perfect for rustic decor - you can see the grain of the wood.

So come check it out for yourself and see what you prefer.

Special Program in Remembrance of Elliot Mednick

On Wednesday, October 25, club members gathered at the Hudson Senior Center and on Zoom for a special program in remembrance of Elliot Mednick. The event was organized by Pam Meoli and featured a presentation by Essdras Suarez, renowned Pulitzer Prize winning street photographer. Elliot was a big fan of Essdras after he presented a program at a club meeting two or three years ago. Elliot took advantage of Essdras's offer to consult with a club member about their photographic images and processes and felt Essdras really helped him improve his work. The Mednick family generously donated a gift to the club in memory of Elliot that allowed us to invite Essdras back for this special night. It was a wonderful presentation. Essdras recalled meeting with Elliot and Elliot's passion and commitment to improving his process and images.

Image by Pam Meoli

Following Essdras's presentation, John Gill shared a slideshow that he and Jane Parker prepared of Elliot's life in pictures and Elliot's competition photos through the years set to the music of Emerson, Lake, and Palmer (an Elliot favorite from his concert photography days). Members shared memories of Elliot and his enthusiastic spirit. We enjoyed a cake made especially with Elliot's love of planes and the moon in mind, thanks to Linda Shelales.

Elliot's family attended the meeting on Zoom and a letter from Jo, Elliot's wife, to John Gill follows:

Hi John,

What a wonderful night and tribute for Elliot! We thoroughly enjoyed it! You were right, Essdras is a very compelling speaker and very interesting to listen to. Elliot would have loved it and loved that I learned more about the photography world too!

I didn't want to wait to speak at the end because it's difficult for me to see photos of Elliot. I haven't been able to put any pics of him up, though, my condo is filled with his photos all over my walls :-)

Thank you so much again and to anyone at the club that made last night possible.

Best,

Jo

Tips and Tricks - November's Theme: Architecture and Architectural Detail Photography

Tips for Architecture and Architectural Detail Photography

Classical, Gothic, Baroque, Islamic, Italianate, Industrial, Art Deco, Postmodern, and Deconstructive are among the many categories that fall under the umbrella of Architectural styles. Some we are very familiar with; others, maybe less so. From the classical ruins of ancient civilizations to the sleek buildings that tower over our modern cities, Architecture tells the tale of Society. Our cultural values, aesthetic sense, and progress over generations are reflected through the work of those architects who have shaped the places where we live, work, and come together. Just as we learn about the past from structures that have withstood the test of time, future generations will learn about us from the contributions made to the world skyline during our era. Architecture photography, also known as building or structure photography, may include photos of existing buildings and structures (interior and exterior), cityscapes, bridges, fountains, towers, windmills, monuments, and statues. Architectural detail photography, on the other hand, focuses more on details, such as ornate windows, columns, pedestals, door frames, door handles, balustrades, decorative cornices, light fixtures, and gates. Architectural detail shots are often based on strong compositions, and they may be abstract images focusing on strong lines and patterns. Whether you are interested in photographing architecture in general or architectural details in particular (for our upcoming November competition), here are some tips to help you as you prepare to capture your next great architectural shot. For competition images, as always, please consult the established PSA and/or NECCC guidelines.

Symmetry - Dawn Law

Tips for Photographing Architecture and Architectural Details

- Do your research: If you are interested in a particular building or structure, learn about the architect and the history of your subject.
- As you prepare your equipment, remember to pack your tripod.
- You may want to pack a few helpful camera lenses (if you have them on hand). A tilt shift lens will correct perspective, keeping consecutive lines straight with minimal distortion. A wide-angle lens will allow you to capture a larger section of the exterior. A fish-eye lens will add distortion to interior shots. Prime lenses will increase sharpness. Telephoto or macro lenses will allow you to focus on intricate details (from further away or up close).

- Certain filters may also be helpful. If working with filters, you should take multiple shots with and without them. A circular polarizing lens will reduce glare and unwanted reflections, and a neutral density filter will help with bright scenes.
- When you arrive at your destination, pay attention to your first impression. What did you notice first? Let your eyes guide you as you visually explore the scene. What catches your eye? Do you want to focus on the exterior? Or the interior?
- Look for structures that provide contrast. Look for dynamic shapes. Look for unique angles. Examine your subject from different vantage points, and explore the details as much as the whole. Look for repeating design elements or unusual symbols.
- If you are interested in photographing older architecture, you are going to want to focus on the natural beauty and elegance. You will probably want to shoot straight forward, with a simple composition. You may want to include some surrounding scenery to give context.
- If you are more interested in modern architecture, you may want to experiment with abstract styles and shapes.
- Lighting is very important when photographing architecture and architectural elements. Soft light will emphasize detail. Pay attention to the weather and the time of day. Overcast days will provide soft light that looks great with architectural elements. Early morning and late afternoon sunlight may offer compelling shadows.
- Side to front lighting produces the best architecture photos by illuminating the structure and casting interesting shadows. You can use shadows to create depth. Side lighting emphasizes textures and shapes. Backlighting is the worst lighting when it comes to architecture because it creates uniform, dark surfaces. The best way to deal with backlighting is to crop out the sky and use a longer exposure to rescue some detail or photograph the building as a silhouette.
- Look for reflections. They may provide added interest.

West Point Lighthouse PEI - Mary Strachen

Tips for Architecture and Architectural Detail Photography - continued from page 19

- Look for intriguing vantage points. For example, many landmarks are typically captured at ground level by the masses. If you take a photo of that landmark from an elevated position, you may be able to offer a new and unique perspective.
- Provide a sense of scale when appropriate. You may find adding a human element helpful in achieving this.
- Distortion in perspective is a common problem with photographing buildings and structures. You will want to keep your vertical lines at 90 degrees, which may be a challenge. As noted previously, a tilt shift lens may help you achieve this. If you don't have access to a tilt shift lens, you may find that photographing from further away using a longer lens helps reduce distortion. Another tip for avoiding distortion in perspective is to stand on something that's about halfway up the height of what you are photographing. Of course, this may not work in the case of larger buildings or structures. You can also correct problems with distortion in perspective in post-processing.
- Consider B&W for your architectural photos. Sepia may also work well, especially with older buildings and structures.
